

Skoda Yeti is the multi-purpose car that ticks all the boxes

The Škoda Yeti is a truly multi-purpose car: it mixes the best aspects of a family car, an MPV and an off-roader. As well as having superb grip and handling on rough terrain, it provides a smooth and comfortable ride on public highways and, with its Varioflex rear seats, which slide, recline, fold and remove, it has more than 20 seating combinations.

Customers can choose from a range of five turbocharged, direct-injection engines from 105bhp to 170bhp, petrol or diesel, which all offer superb performance and excellent fuel efficiency. They are also available in two- or four-wheel drive and with a choice of manual or state-of-the art, twin-clutch DSG automatic gearboxes.

Yeti is also available in five trim levels: E, S, SE and Elegance and Skoda's most economical range, GreenLine.

The Yeti GreenLine proves that a crossover vehicle can be economical, with combined fuel consumption of 61.4 mpg (119g/km of CO₂). The trademark performance is not compromised as the Yeti GreenLine remains a very agile car. It accelerates from 0 to 62 mph in just 12.1 seconds and can reach a top speed of 109 mph.

It's this performance, affordability, engineering and comfort that meant Yeti won five awards in 2010, including Auto Express's Car of the Year.

TopGear magazine had nothing but praise for its off-road ability: "We tried the Yeti down slippery banks, through tricky furrows and on the sort of hills that'd get spirit levels in a twist. And it works."
